THE STORE INSIDE THE SUPERSTORE: THE B&H USED DEPARTMENT PAGE 322

Dear Customers,

This spring, B&H turned 46 years old. We started as a small shop selling film and cameras on Warren Street near City Hall in New York City. A few years later we expanded, moving to West 17th Street, and 20 years ago moved to our current location on West 34th Street. We learned back on Warren Street that if you're always honest and treat people right, they will come back.

B&H started as a family business in 1973, and 46 years later our founders still come to work every day and still own the company. Fortunately, we've grown and now strive to exceed customer expectations in our New York Superstore, on the phone, on the internet, and through our B2B efforts.

Every day since we opened B&H, we've believed in building customers for life by delivering value, knowing what we're talking about, excelling in service, and offering the broadest selection in our industry. I thank you for your business and for trusting B&H as your source for photo, video, audio, computers, and all your creative technology gear needs. We know you have many choices, and we appreciate that you've chosen B&H.

In the world of consumer electronics technology, spring/summer is always exciting with manufacturers bringing us new products that stretch the imagination and help us all improve our craft. This season has been no exception with a high level of 'wow' introductions. I hope you enjoy going through our catalog and sharing our excitement.

Perhaps B&H's most important strength is the commitment, knowledge, and passion of our employees. I am very proud that we've shared the stories of a few employees via videos on our website and on YouTube – if you visit our YouTube channel or search for 'Love of the Craft' on our website, you can watch these videos and see our 'secret sauce' – people really make the difference here.

I wish all a wonderful summer and thank you for choosing B&H. We work very hard every day to exceed your expectations. We thank you and appreciate your patronage.

Wall Mounts

Fixed Wall Mounts

Slim fixed wall mounts enable flush mounting of your flat panel display. While other mount types offer greater viewing flexibility, fixed mounts are a great choice for those who wish to maintain a clean and tidy appearance.

Tilting Wall Mounts

Tilting wall mounts offer a slim form factor that rivals fixed mounts, while allowing a slight adjustment for customized viewing. They are especially useful when your TV is elevated, allowing you to point the screen downward.

Full-Motion Wall Mounts

For enhanced viewing flexibility and easy access to your TV's connectors, full-motion wall mounts may be your solution. While not as slim as other mounts, they offer superior adjustment, with some offering tilt, pan, and rotating capabilities.

HDMI Cables

HDMI allows you to transfer high-quality audio and video streams simultaneously over a single cable. Since its inception, HDMI has evolved, incorporating a number of feature additions along the way. Furthermore, each version is backward compatible with previous generations. While some features require that both components support the version in which the feature was introduced, you can still connect devices easily and enjoy high-definition video and audio. Furthermore, if you have high-speed HDMI cables, you can continue to use them across HDMI versions. You will, however, need a cable that specifically supports HDMI Ethernet Channel connectivity to enjoy this functionality. Mini-HDMI cables and adapters are also available to accommodate connectivity from compatible mobile devices such as smartphones and tablets.

iMac

The Apple iMac measures at just 5 mm at its edges. The widescreen display features LED backlighting for vibrant, accurate color. With in-plane switching (IPS) technology, the iMac has a wide 178° viewing angle. The iMac houses a 9th-Gen Intel Core processor with 2666 MHz DDR4 RAM.

The world is full of color, and iMac brings more of them to your screen. The Retina display uses P3 color that shifts away from standard white LEDs to advanced red-green phosphor LEDs. That means all three colors — red, green, and blue — are more equally represented and show off real-world color with more balance and precision, bringing all your photos and content to life more vividly.

Mac Pro

STARTING AT 2,999.00

Apple revisited the architecture of the Mac Pro's internal components in order to maximize performance and minimize heat. With a unified thermal core, Apple opted for a leaner, lighter, and quieter structure that was more streamlined. The unique cylinder design stands just 9.9 inches tall with a diameter of just 6.6 inches, which allows it to be a professional workstation that can actually sit on your desk.

The Mac Pro has six Thunderbolt 2 ports and a high-speed interface that can move data at up to 20 Gb/s. That's four times the speed of the USB 3.0 standard. Speaking of USB 3.0, Apple added four USB 3.0 ports to ensure you have full native connectivity options with your USB-compatible peripherals such as external hard drives.

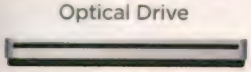

iLife has a complete suite of digital creativity applications. Easy enough for anyone to use, iLife will help you edit your home movies, organize digital photos, and/compose original music. iLife includes iPhoto, iMovie, and GarageBand.

iWork provides three apps to keep you productive. Pages allow you to make creative word documents. Numbers helps you make spreadsheets more visually insightful. Keynote allows you to create a powerful presentation, complete with animated charts and interactive tables with cinematic effects and transitions.

NVIDIA. GEFORCE® Graphic Cards

NVIDIA GEFORCE GTX GAME READY

GEFORCE RTX20 SERIES

Based on NVIDIA's Turing architecture and designed to handle the graphical demands of hardcore gaming, the GeForce GTX 20 Graphics Card provides major improvements in performance, memory bandwidth, and power efficiency over its predecessor, the high-performance Pascal architecture. It also introduces innovative graphics features and technologies that redefine the computer as the platform for playing AAA games and taking full advantage of virtual reality via NVIDIA VRWorks. Cards availbale from Asus, EVGA, Gigabyte, MSI and Zotac.

Real-Time Ray Tracing

Accelerated by the use of RT cores, the GTX 20 series is the first graphic display card to offer real-time ray tracing, a rendering technique for lifelike lighting, shadows and reflections, delivering a new level of realism for the advanced gamer. Featuring a new Ray Tracing unit (RT Core) which can dedicate processors to the ray tracing in hardware, this new GPU microarchitecture accelerates Ray-Tracing and AI Inferencing, delivering a more photo-realistic experience.

You Can Print Bigger Than You Think!

by Shawn C. Steiner

People always think they need a camera with more megapixels if they want to make large prints. That is just not true. You can do a lot more with the camera you already have. Believe it or not, you don't need all that much to produce sharp, vivid prints. If Apple can print billboards that were "Shot on iPhone," you should have no problem making display-worthy prints from your existing system. All you need is a great editing technique and an understanding of printing and display.

Understanding Megapixels and Printing

Generally speaking, more megapixels will allow you to print larger. If you want a standard to go on when figuring out megapixels and how they relate to print sizes, I would go with 300 dpi. This is a high-resolution setting that is acceptable for fine-art printing and close viewing distances. It looks good from pretty much anywhere. So, going with a standard 24MP sensor that produces 6000 x 4000 pixel images, you can print up to 20 x 13.3" without worry. Using a 51.4MP sensor, such as the one found in the Fujifilm GFX 50S, gives you 8256 x 6192 resolution, meaning this will get you up to a 27.5 x 20.6" print following the 300-dpi figure.

Why 300 dpi, you ask? This is a setting that provides enough detail for sharp images, even upon close inspection of your prints. That's what makes it popular for photographers, especially if they are selling archival, fine-art prints. Not all photographers are working with 50+ megapixel medium-format systems and I'm sure you've noticed plenty of prints larger than the previously stated figures up for sale. Using Photoshop and other advanced imaging software, you can add some sharpening and smart upscaling techniques to effectively increase the resolution of your image, making it possible to print larger.

Arguably, many prints don't require 300 dpi. Go down to 240 dpi and your average viewer probably couldn't even tell the difference. For some, you can even squeak by at 180 dpi with some good scaling and no one would be any wiser. Consider your audience. If all you want to do is hang up some photos in your home or gift some prints to your friends and family, as long as they aren't also very technically minded pro photographers, you will probably be just fine. And, plenty of people love seeing huge prints.

Another aspect to consider is the actual image content. If you pulled off a smooth panning shot where a large chunk of the image is blurred, then overall sharpness likely isn't as big a concern. Or it is a very noisy shot from a concert where fine detail is lacking and you can get away with a less sharp final print. On the other side of this, if you have a well-exposed shot with excellent detail, that will be easier to blow up to larger sizes as the detail is there to start.

Viewing Distance is Key

Printing big makes a lot more sense when you consider viewing distance. Very rarely are you going to look at a huge 100"-wide print from a foot away. You won't even be able to see the whole image if you do that. If you take a step back, not only do you get to see the image, the image itself no longer needs as dense a dpi setting to look good. A great comparison is a large 55+" television. If you get right up next to a modern 4K screen you can still make out the pixels on the screen. But, when you are sitting on the couch watching your favorite movie, you are probably quite happy with the sharpness of the image.

The same principle applies to printed images. Billboards are a perfect example, because you are looking at them from so far away that you could use what are considered extremely low resolutions for the size. If you have ever walked through New York and seen the giant ads printed on buildings from up close, you can see they aren't perfectly sharp prints. By stepping back, the dots effectively condense in your vision and appear sharp from a distance.

Applying this principle in a household environment would be thinking about where you expect to hang your photographs. Hanging one over the headboard of your bed you can assume people aren't going to jump up on your bed and examine it up close and, because of this you can not only get away with making a larger print but a larger photo will look better up there. If you want to hang it in an entryway where people might stand for a minute to take off jackets, getting a better, closer look at the print, you may want to have your highest-resolution print.

It is tough to put hard rules on this since some people will have different requirements than others, and some images will handle upscaling better. The farther away the print is going to be, the larger you can get. For average camera systems, I would have no problem going up to 30 x 40" for at-home prints. Some images and higher-res cameras can go higher with ease.

Editing Matters

Digital printing is highly technical. You need to understand gamuts, monitors, profiling, and paper to make sure that what you see on your screen is what you are going to get on your print. A large part of this is checking your settings to make sure you are producing edits that look good when translated to paper. You can also "cheat" in some ways to make your photos look better. One way to increase perceived sharpness is by increasing contrast. It doesn't have to be a major change, but it can work wonders. Clarity in Lightroom is a good example of this, because it sharpens images by adjusting contrast in the midtones, giving you a little extra pop.

Running some paper profiles and doing soft proofing will help confirm what you see is what you are going to get, and helps you adjust the color and contrast for the specific images/printer/paper combination. Another thing to do is make sure your image is scaled in Photoshop or another editing application before sending it to your printer. If the image size isn't done in software where you have extra controls and methods of upscaling your images, you must rely on whatever the printer can do. Printers are good, but they aren't as good as dedicated editing software.

With a little confidence, editing, and an understanding of how people produce and view printed images, you can start making those impressively large prints you have always wanted. ■

Paper And Inkjet Media

When looking for paper, basis weight and thickness are related specifications that tie into a paper's overall feel and quality. Weight refers to the heft of a paper and demonstrates a paper's feel and strength over time. It is important to know as not all printers can accept thick fine art paper.

The material the paper is made of, which could be wood fiber, canvas, cotton rag, vinyl, rice, bamboo, or others, plays a large part in how the printed images will look, due to how it holds the ink and the physical characteristics of each. These coatings can have their own effect on the print as well, giving each combination a unique look.

The brightness, whiteness & tone indicate the overall appearance of a paper and have a significant effect on print quality. The brightest part of your image is limited by the brightness of the paper itself, while the overall color and tone are determined by the whiteness, which is usually listed as a warm (natural), neutral, or cool color.

Opacity: Tells users how transparent a sheet of paper or banner material is. This plays a role in deciding what types of material are best suited to your specific application.

Rolls / Sheets: Many papers are found in both sheets and rolls, with each offering its own benefits. Rolls allow for long panoramas and work wonderfully with large format printers for high-volume printing. Sheets, on the other hand, offer convenience for smaller formats.

Single- / Double-Sided: Due to the necessity of coatings on modern papers, most are not coated on both sides in order to save on costs. If you require double-sided printing for a book or other application, you will need to make sure your selected paper is optimized for two-sided printing.

Computer Cables

You've finally purchased the computer you wanted. Whether it was a laptop or a desktop computer, you'll want to use the full advantage of all the ports. It can be quite daunting to know which cables to use. For starters, most ports on your computer will have female connectors. Female connectors are ports that you plug into. Cables will usually have male connectors, which plug into the female connectors on your computer.

There are also different types of ports. Thunderbolt and USB are used to transfer data while DisplayPort, DVI, and VGA ports are used to output video to an external display, such as a monitor or an HDTV.

Thunderbolt: Access high-speed peripherals and high-res displays via one simple port that carries DisplayPort and PCIe data. Thunderbolt gives you two channels with 10 Gbps of throughput in both directions. Thunderbolt 2 pushes that to 20 Gbps, Thunderbolt 3 utilizes the reversible USB Type-C connector. Thunderbolt 3 also has a maximum throughput of 40 Gbps.

USB / USB-C: USB can be found on practically every modern computer. USB 2.0 supports up to 480 Mbps while USB 3.0 supports up to 5 Gbps. USB 3.1 supports up to 10 Gbps. Most computers use the USB Type-A ports while the USB Type-B port can be found on computer peripherals, such as printers. The micro-USB port is usually found on mobile devices.

Ethernet: Wired Internet connection for desktops and workstations. Most computers utilize the RJ-45 LAN jack, which supports 10/100 Mbps Fast Ethernet or 10/100/1000 Mbps Gigabit Ethernet. If you have a 10/100 Mbps Fast Ethernet jack, a Cat5 cable should be good enough.

DisplayPort / Mini DisplayPort: Usually found on Mac computers, DisplayPort is a digital display interface that supports video, audio, and other forms of data in a single cable. DisplayPort is the older, bigger version while mini DisplayPort is the smaller version that shares the same design as Thunderbolt.

DVI: DVI transmits uncompressed digital video. The DVI connector is given one of three names, depending on which signal it uses. DVI-I means it integrates both digital and analog signals into the same connector. DVI-D means it only supports a digital signal, single or dual link. DVI-A means it only supports an analog signal.

VGA: Around since the 1980s, certain laptops still sport the analog interface as an addition, which is useful for backwards compatible with older projectors and monitors. VGA is usually seen as a 15-pin connector. On laptops and smaller devices, a mini-VGA connector can be found.

CANON LENSES

85mm f/1.4L IS USM

A short telephoto prime well suited to portraiture applications. As an L-series lens, it is characterized by a sophisticated optical layout that includes one glass-molded aspherical element to greatly reduce spherical aberrations and distortion for improved sharpness and clarity.

11-24mm f/4L USM

This versatile wide-angle zoom features a constant f/4 maximum aperture and utilizes Super UD, UD, and aspherical elements to control aberrations and distortions. Subwavelength and Air Sphere coatings reduce flare while a fluorine coating and weather-resistant design permit use in trying conditions.

16-35mm f/2.8L III USM

This classic wide-angle zoom is a member of Canon's esteemed L-series and features a fast, constant f/2.8 maximum aperture, along with a sophisticated optical design, consisting of aspherical and UD elements and a protective fluorine coating.

24-70mm f/2.8L II USM

This wide-angle to short-telephoto zoom features a constant f/2.8 maximum aperture, Super UD and UD glass, along with aspherical elements to minimize chromatic aberrations and distortions. Additionally, this 24-70mm f/2.8 also sports a weather-resistant design and ring-type USM.

70-200mm f/2.8L IS III USM

This high-performance telephoto zoom is characterized not only by its f/2.8 constant maximum aperture but also by a four-stop effective Optical Image Stabilizer. One fluorite and five UD elements maintain sharp, clear imaging, and this classic zoom also features weather-resistant construction.

100-400mm f/4.5-5.6L IS II USM

An expansive tele-zoom with a compact form factor, this updated L-series lens features both fluorite and Super UD elements to control aberrations throughout the zoom range. A four-stop effective Optical Image Stabilizer compensates for camera shake while the USM delivers quick autofocus.

NIKON LENSES

20mm f/1.8G

This bright wide-angle prime incorporates aspherical and extra low dispersion elements into its design for consistent, clear image quality that is further enhanced by the Nano Crystal Coating. A Silent Wave Motor also contributes to fast, accurate, and quiet autofocus performance.

105mm f/2.8G IF-ED VR Micro

Nikon's take on the classic telephoto macro lens, this 105mm prime offers 1:1 life-size magnification, a 12" minimum focusing distance, and three-stop effective VR image stabilization. One ED element is featured as well as a Nano Crystal Coating.

70-200mm f/2.8E FL ED VR

This portrait-length to telephoto zoom makes use of low dispersion, fluorite, and HRI elements to deliver exceptional optical quality, while a fast f/2.8 constant aperture, Vibration Reduction, and intuitive controls benefit its use in fast-paced working conditions.

105mm f/1.4E ED

An incredibly bright portrait-length lens designed for FX-format F-mount DSLRs. The f/1.4 maximum aperture benefits working in low-light conditions and also affords extensive control over focus for shallow depth of field imagery. A Nano Crystal Coat reduces flare and ghosting.

300mm f/4E PF ED VR

Combines a Phase Fresnel element with ED glass to blend long reach with a more compact, lightweight form factor. An electromagnetic diaphragm ensures consistent exposures, even with high-speed shooting, and a 4.5-stop effective VR compensates for camera shake.

200-500mm f/4G ED VR II

Spanning a broad telephoto range, this versatile zoom features a constant f/5.6 maximum aperture and VR image stabilization. Its construction also incorporates three ED elements, a Super Integrated Coating, and an electromagnetic aperture mechanism.

FE 85mm f/1.4 GM

Portrait performance reaches a new pinnacle with astonishing resolution plus bokeh of unmatched beauty. This 85mm F1.4 portrait lens renders infocus areas with unequalled resolution while the background dissolves into the smoothest, lushest bokeh imaginable. All of this is by design, supported by manufacturing and testing technology that only Sony can provide, for new dimensions of photographic and cinematographic expression.

FE 24-70mm f/2.8 GM

The ultimate choice for professional portrait, travel, and event photographers seeking the highest possible optical performance. The 'XA element reduces aberration and delivers the ultimate resolution throughout the entire zoom range and aperture range as well as from corner to corner of all image files.

FE 70-200mm f/2.8 GM OSS

A popular telephoto zoom focal length featuring a bright constant maximum aperture, this lens covers portrait-length to telephoto perspectives and is designed for E-mount mirrorless cameras. Characterized by both its fast f/2.8 maximum aperture and inclusion of OSS (Optical SteadyShot) image stabilization, this lens is ideally suited for handheld shooting of distant and fast-moving subjects.

FE 16-35mm f/2.8 GM

A fast and flexible wide-angle zoom with a constant f/2.8 maximum aperture, this lens offers consistent performance throughout the zoom range and benefits working in low-light conditions. Incorporates two extra low dispersion elements along with two XA elements and three aspherical elements.

FE 85mm f/1.8

An ideal portrait-length prime, the FE 85mm f/1.8 is a sleek short-telephoto lens designed for full-frame E-mount mirrorless cameras. The bright f/1.8 maximum aperture benefits this lens's use in low-light conditions and also affords extensive control over depth of field when working with selective focus techniques.

FE 16-35mm f/4 ZA OSS T*

Rounding out the trio of constant f/4 zooms, this versatile wide-angle lens has four-stop effective OSS image stabilization as well as aspherical and ED elements to reduce distortions and aberrations. A T* coating also helps to suppress flare and ghosting.

FE 24-105mm f/4 G OSS

A wide-angle to short-telephoto zoom designed for E-mount cameras, this lens features an f/4 constant maximum aperture along with three ED and four aspherical elements to control distortions and aberrations. Optical SteadyShot controls camera shake, and a Nano AR coating suppresses lens flare and ghosting for high contrast and color accuracy.

FE 12-24mm f/4 G

Ultra-wide and versatile flexible zoom lens, characterized by its constant f/4 maximum aperture. Benefitting the wide field of view is a sophisticated optical design that incorporates aspherical and low dispersion glass elements to control both spherical and chromatic aberrations for improved sharpness and clarity.

FE 70-200mm f/4.0 G OSS

This classic telephoto zoom incorporates Super ED, ED, and aspherical elements along with a Nano AR Coating for consistent clarity throughout the zoom range. Optical SteadyShot stabilization compensates for camera shake, and focus hold and range limiter buttons benefit controlled AF performance.

TravelHood

The TravelHood is a lightweight alternative or replacement to the rigid lens hood that comes with your lens. Its ribbed design allows it to fold nearly flat to easily store in your gear bag or suitcase, making this hood your perfect long lens companion.

Made with lightweight water-resistant material, it deflects stray light to prevent glare and lens flare. The TravelHood also helps to protect the lens from scratches and the elements like rain and dust.

PHOTOGRAPHY FILTER GUIDE

By Todd Vorenkamp

If you are serious about photography, especially if you take pictures for a living, you want as much control as possible over your images at the time of capture. Filters are essential tools for the photographer or filmmaker that can provide added control over your digital or film images. Filters are also used as an addition to the creative photographer's palette. A well-chosen filter can not only correct a multitude of issues on location or in the studio, it can also change the overall look of a scene and the nature of the image from a literal depiction to an interpretive—even abstract—creation.

Aside from the filter's optical purpose, construction of the filter is an important buying consideration. Rings are made of aluminum or brass. Brass filter threads have less of a tendency to bind when the temperature changes. Aluminum filters are lighter, and can be stronger than brass—preventing thread damage. Some filters have knurling on the sides to facilitate easier removal and mounting.

UV/CLEAR/PROTECTIVE

The UV filter is a clear filter that many photographers use to protect the front element of their lens from scratches, dirt, dust, moisture, and fingerprints. The filter also cuts the low-level UV light that travels through the lens and helps reduce haze in images. A high-quality UV filter will not cause image degradation and might save your expensive lens from damage.

NEUTRAL DENSITY FILTERS

Neutral Density (ND)

Neutral Density filters basically darken the scene before your camera lens. This lets you to shoot at slower shutter speeds, allowing the blurring of motion in the frame on a bright day. They are used often to turn streams and waterfalls into milky smooth cascades of water and show the motion of people or cars, trucks, etc. Yes, you could theoretically simulate these effects in post-production, but it would be incredibly time consuming. It is much more fun to do it at capture!

Variable Neutral Density (VND)

A Variable Neutral Density filter has the same mission as the ND filter, but it allows you to dial-in the amount of darkness of the filter so that you can fine-tune your exposure to meet your shutter speed, aperture, or ISO needs.

Graduated Neutral Density Filter (GND)

Graduated Neutral Density filters generally feature a clear side and a gradual progression toward a darker section of the filter. They are used primarily for sunset and sunrise images—allowing photographers to retain detail in the bright sky while showing foreground landscapes. Without the filter, you could expose for the foreground, but the sky would be overexposed and very bright. Or, you could expose for the sky and have the foreground lost in darkness. The GND filter helps even the exposure.

CIRCULAR POLARIZING

Of all the filters in the photography world, the one whose effects cannot be simulated digitally is the polarizer. The polarizing filter increases the definition of puffy clouds in the sky, darkens the blue sky, and cuts down on glare and reflections from water, glass, and other shiny surfaces. If you are using autofocus lenses, you will need a circular polarizer. Circular polarizers also work on manual focus. Linear polarizing filters are for manual focus lenses only.

B&W CONTRAST

When shooting B&W film (or a B&W digital camera), red, orange, and yellow Color Correction filters help increase contrast in an image by limiting different wavelengths of colored light. A yellow filter, for example, lightens red and yellow tones while darkening blue and green tones. When converted to B&W, the result is contrasty images that pop.

ADDITIONAL POPULAR FILTERS

STAR FILTERS: With etched cross screens, these Star Effect filters create multi-pointed star points around specular points of light. Some people love them, some do not, but, when used in moderation, they can add a bit of flare to an image.

STREAK EFFECT: Streak Effect filters add streaks across specular highlights in an image, for a unique look.

COLOR ENHANCEMENT: There are a great many Color Enhancement and Solid Color effects filters that serve the photographer by limiting different color wavelengths of light to the camera, or serving to warm or cool the feel of an image with color tint, make fall foliage pop, and more!

CLOSE-UP FILTERS: These filters, optically, allow the camera to focus closer than with the lens alone, giving you the flexibility to do some macro photography from your existing lens.

SOLID COLOR EFFECTS: Some filters intensify all colors and others can simulate things like sepia-tone film.

SOFT FOCUS: Adds a soft focus look to portraits; reducing contrast, smoothing skin, and facial blemishes while maintaining overall sharpness.

DAY TO NIGHT: Day to Night filters change a daylight landscape into a virtual nighttime appearance.

CLEAR NIGHT: This filter absorbs light cast by street lamps and other urban light sources to reduce light pollution in night sky images.

IR/UV CUT: These filters cut out certain wavelengths of UV and IR light to cut through atmospheric haze and allow clearer and sharper outdoor images.

Is the Darkroom Still a Thing?

by Allan Weitz

Not long ago, film was declared all but dead. Kodak, Fujifilm, Ilford, and other manufacturers began scaling back their product lines while others bailed altogether. Digital is king. Film is dead. Long live the JPEG.

Well, it turns out that film hasn't quite left its last gasp. Rolls of inside-the-tube 400 slide film and T-Max P3200 black-and-white negative film are once again available, and because of a paucity of new film cameras, the prices of used film cameras continue to skyrocket. So, to answer the question, "Is the Darkroom Still a Thing?" the answer is yes—the darkroom, like film, is alive and well, even if the pickings are slimmer compared to the heyday of analog photography.

Film

There is no shortage of film. B&H currently stocks black-and-white negative, color negative, and color slide films from 16 manufacturers and distributors. We stock roll film (35mm, 120, 110, 620, 828, and 70mm x 50') as well as sheet films (2.25 x 3.25" through 30 x 40").

Film-Processing Supplies

The first thing you're going to need is a sink with hot and cold running water. If you're planning on making larger prints, stainless steel sinks up to 8' long and 2' wide are available from B&H. As for plumbing and water issues, if you're handy I recommend DIY YouTube tutorials, or if in doubt—call a licensed plumber.

Once you expose your film you can either send it out to a lab to have it processed or you can process the film yourself. It's not all that difficult and all you need are film reels, a developing tank, chemistry, and a room that can be easily light-sealed (typically a hijacked bathroom or laundry room) with that temperature-controlled water supply.

Something to keep in mind when purchasing (or DIY building) darkroom components is materials. Whenever possible, try to incorporate tools and accessories made of non-porous materials such as stainless steel and glass, rather than plastic or wood. Regardless of how well you clean them, plastic film reels and bamboo tongs with rubber tips eventually become contaminated. Stainless steel reels and glass graduates can be easily cleaned and chemically neutralized. For this reason, tools and accessories that can become contaminated should labeled and restricted for use with specific chemicals and/or processes.

Pro Tip: Having a temperature-controlled water supply is essential if you plan on developing film or prints. Before planning your darkroom make sure you can maintain a consistent running water temperature of 68° (the typical temperature for developing film) for a minimum of a half hour, preferably longer.

Tanks and reels for processing film are available in steel and plastic. Plastic reels are more resilient than metal reels—if you drop a metal reel and knock it out-of-round, loading film can become difficult, if not impossible. You can drop plastic reels without rendering them useless, but unlike steel, plastic absorbs chemistry if not thoroughly cleaned after use, which can cause contamination issues. Most photographers prefer metal reels because once you learn the trick of winding the film onto the spiraled reel, it's as intuitive as riding a bike. And if you don't drop them they last forever.

Pro Tip: Before purchasing used metal film reels, roll them on their ends across a flat surface. The reels should roll straight and true. If they wobble as they roll across the flat surface, they've been dropped, they're bent, they can't be unbent and, even if you can have them for free, you don't want them!

Sheet film can be loaded into sheet film hangers and processed in larger processing tanks.

Your other option is to purchase a table top film processor, which automates the process while maintaining precise, pre-programed processing times and temperature controls.

Other essentials for film processing include a dry work surface, a wet work surface, at least one graduate, large (1-gallon) sealable storage containers for developer, stop bath, fixer, bleach, etc., film cleaner, non-abrasive wipes and canned or compressed air for cleaning negatives, film-drying clips, a light table, compressed air, and a bottle opener for popping the end caps off 35mm film canisters.

Lastly, you will need a film-drying booth, which is essentially a heated, actively ventilated, dust-proof enclosure. Ventilated racks for air-drying sheet films are available, and if need be you can always hang your film to dry from clips attached to the shower curtain rod.

Pro Tip: Black-and-white negative film is easier to process than color negative and slide films, which require tighter time and temperature controls. Before attempting color film processing, read up on the subject and, if you do decide to give it a try, shoot and process a few test rolls before processing "keeper" film rolls.

Chemistry choices, processing times, and processing temperatures are determined by your film choice. Refer to the film manufacturer's recommendations before processing your film.

Pro Tip: It's imperative that your darkroom have an adequate ventilation system. Darkroom chemicals should never be handled in a sealed environment. Light-tight louver panels and exhaust fans are available at B&H.

Lightboxes and Loupes

For editing negatives, it's handy to have a backlit light table or light box. Quality loupes for close-up editing are available for 35mm and medium-format negatives. For critical viewing of larger prints, we also sell viewing stations with color and intensity-controlled light sources.

Enlargers, Enlarging Lenses, and Other Darkroom Essentials

Enlargers are alive and well at B&H, for printing film formats ranging from 35mm through 4 x 5". Prices range from a few hundred dollars to a bit over $1,000 without a lens, which you will also need. If you plan on printing color, you must add a color head or a set of color filtration filters.

Your choice in lenses is based on the focal length of your film format. For printing 35mm negatives you'll want to use a 50-55mm lens. For medium format, a 75-90mm lens, and for 4 x 5" negatives, a 150-180mm lens.

Other items you will need include an easel, a red and/or amber safelight, a timer, trays for developer, stop bath, fixer, and final wash (or more if printing color), tongs for each tray, and chemical storage bottles. You'll also need enlarging paper, which is another topic altogether.

If you're printing on resin-based (RC) enlarging papers, your prints can be placed against a flat, non-porous surfaced, squeegeed, and hung by a corner to air dry. Vented drying racks are also available for RC papers. For fiber-based prints, you will need either an appropriately-sized blotter book or an electric print dryer, both of which are available in a choice of sizes and capacities.

Print and Negative Storage

At the end of the day, you will be needing a negative and print storage system. Storage sleeves and boxes for negatives and prints are available in a variety of sizes and formats. Storage sleeves and boxes are available in 2 flavors: archival and non-archival. Except for prints and negatives that will be of little or no future use to you, I strongly suggest storing your negatives and prints in archival-quality sleeves and storage boxes. It's also highly recommended that you store your prints and negatives in a cool, dry, and preferably low-light environment to better ensure maximum print and negative life. ■

Tripod Buying Guide

by Todd Vorenkamp

The tripod is one of the best photo accessories you can invest in to improve your photography immediately. At first glance, the purchasing decision for a tripod is an easy one. But, once you see the number of brands and variations available at B&H Photo, the question of "What tripod should I buy?" can become overwhelming quickly.

Let's try to simplify things, shall we?

The tripod consists of two primary components—the tripod legs and a tripod head. Usually, a tripod head comes bundled with the tripod legs but, yes, you may purchase legs and tripod heads separately and design a rig that will meet your specific needs. Luckily for photographers everywhere, there are standard screw thread sizes (3/8"-16 or ¼"-20) to attach almost any tripod head to any set of tripod legs.

Let's talk about legs and heads. We will start from the top down; with the tripod head.

TRIPOD HEADS

There are several different types of tripod heads on the market. The ball head and the three-way head are the most common and versatile of the bunch.

The traditional three-way, or pan-and-tilt head, has three control arms extending from it that allow you to move the camera in one axis at a time. The disadvantage of the three-way head is that they are not as compact as a ball head for transport, but there are advantages to having control of one axis at a time.

The ball head is the most common type. A single friction knob loosens the head and allows you to reposition your camera quickly; then you twist the single knob to tighten and lock it. Some ball heads have additional controls for panning and friction adjustment. Additionally, the pistol-grip head is a variation on the ball head that allows for repositioning by squeezing a trigger rather than operating the friction knob.

TRIPOD LEGS

Below the head, are the legs. The biggest purchasing consideration you need to give to your tripod legs is the type of leg locks they employ—twist locks or flip locks.

Flip locks are small levers that release the telescoping legs so that you can extend or retract the tripod. Flip locks are quick and easy to use, but the downside is that sometimes you can get your fingers pinched in them and, if you are working in sand or very dirty environments, they can become jammed.

Twist locks, as their name implies, are threaded and twist around the legs to loosen or tighten and allow the legs to telescope. They are more durable than flip locks due to their simple design. Some photographers feel that they are more cumbersome than flip locks.

The next consideration for tripod legs is: number of sections. Telescoping tripod legs are broken up into sections. The more sections a tripod has, the more compactly it can collapse. Generally, a tripod will have more stability with fewer sections. Also, it is faster to set up and break down a three-section tripod than a four- or five-section tripod.

Lastly, you should give thought to the material from which the tripod is made. The most common construction materials are aluminum, carbon fiber, and wood. There are also some semi-exotic outliers, such as basalt lava. Each material has its own benefits and detractors. Wood is great for vibration absorption, but wood tripods are heavy and usually do not retract to short lengths. Aluminum is durable and lightweight, but cold to the touch if you are shooting in winter weather. Carbon fiber has excellent strength-to-weight properties, but can increase the cost of your system.

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

Now that you have a quick background on the tripod head and legs, it is time to talk about other considerations that will refine your tripod purchase.

Load capacity: Tripods and tripod heads have a published load capacity. This is not the breaking weight of the system. You will not destroy a tripod head by overloading it. However, what you will do, when the weight of your kit exceeds the load capacity, is compromise the stability of the rig and that can lead to unwanted camera shake. That leads to blurry photos. Also, if the tripod head has a lower load capacity than the legs or vice versa, the figure you need to keep in mind is that lower load capacity. Figure out what your heaviest camera and lens weigh, add your battery, strap, and other accessories, and choose a tripod and head that has a load capacity greater two to three times the weight of your heaviest kit—or kit that you wish to own in the future.

Weight: In general, the heavier the tripod, the more stable it is and the higher load capacity it has. Increased stability is fantastic until you must travel with your tripod and carry it on a vacation or into the field. Conversely, the lightest tripods are a pleasure to travel with but may not give you the stability you need, especially if you have heavy gear or are shooting on a windy day.

Height: Again, we are faced with another tradeoff. It is ideal to have a tripod and head that, with your gear mounted on it, bring your camera to your eye level. The amount of annoyance at bending from the waist to compose a shot on a tripod is directly related to the amount of soreness in your back, how tall you are, and how far you need to bend. The tradeoff is that taller tripods are heavier and do not retract to the same lengths that shorter tripods do.

Folded Length: Having mentioned the maximum height, definitely keep an eye on the folded length of the tripod. This specification is critical if you want to travel with your tripod inside your luggage or camera backpack.

"Travel" tripod: In case you were wondering, a "travel tripod" usually has a more compact form factor (for pack-ability) and lighter overall weight. But a travel tripod is any tripod with which you are willing to travel.

Quick-release plates: Many tripod heads have quick-release systems that attach to an add-on plate at the bottom of a camera or lens. The most common of these is the Arca-type-compatible plate, based on an Arca-Swiss design, but some manufactures have their own proprietary plates. Keep this in mind if you already have accessorized with things like an Arca-type-compatible L-bracket for your camera.

Investment

Like most things in life, you get what you pay for with a tripod. However, there are some very good, reasonably priced tripods on the market. A good tripod and tripod head are an investment and can be one that lasts a lifetime if you get the correct combo right out of the gate.

There are a lot of cheap tripods collecting dust in the corners of your neighborhood thrift store. Why? Because beginning photographers chose the bargain path and, after they realized that their tripod was insufficient, cast it aside as if it were a consumable.

My advice to photographer friends and B&H customers is to buy the absolute best tripod legs and tripod head that you can afford. If you are serious about photography, be serious about your tripod. The right tripod will outlast your camera and lenses and, by avoiding bargain tripods and heads, you will save money (and frustration) in the long run and, most importantly, improve your photography!

Oben

A unique lateral arm on select models of Oben tripods allows you to lock the arm at a variety of angles; with the legs at their widest setting, you can get the camera down to ground level. Other features include retractable spikes, adjustable flip locks, and a reversible center column on non-lateral models. The carbon fiber tripods come with either flip locks or twist locks and have 6x carbon fiber non-rotating legs.

RRS Mark 2 Series

Improved ergonomics make operating these tripods more comfortable and seamless. Additional 1/4"-20 sockets along the outside of the tripod's apex allow you to attach optional accessories. They are faster to lock/unlock and hold up better against the elements. Redesigned twist locks prevent grit and debris. An added vent at the top of each leg allows efficient air transfer when extending or collapsing. Made in the USA.

Small Clip Clamp with Rubber Rivet Jaw

Light Stand Boom Clamp
Allows mounting of a boom arm, such as Impact's Mini-Boom Arm, to a heavy-duty stand. It permits tilt and swivel adjustment.

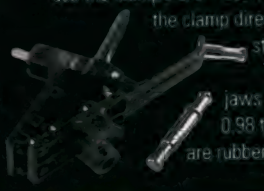

Conversion Adapters
These handy accessories allow you to change the stud on a stand to accommodate equipment, connect grip gear, customize a setup to your specific needs, or repurpose items you already own.

Micro Clamp
Lightweight and sturdy, the Micro Clamp can clamp onto tubes with a maximum diameter of 1.38" (35 mm) and has a load capacity of 2.2 lb (1.0kg). It features a 5/8" (16 mm) socket at its base.

Tilting Boom Pivot Clamp

Adjustable Gaffer Clamp
This accessory features one permanent 5/8" baby stud and one removable baby pin for mounting lights or other accessories. You can also leave the pin out and use the clamp's 5/8" receiver to mount the clamp directly to baby studs & pins. The clamp's jaws adjust from 0.98 to 2.55" and are rubber cushioned.

B&H stocks all sorts of lighting fixtures. And we haven't forgotten your post-purchase lamp needs, as illustrated by the chart below. Simply locate your brand in the left-hand column and your fixture next to it. Once you've found it, follow its line to the right where you'll find wattage choices for 120 VAC U.S./North American use. Customers who are traveling, or live in areas that use current other than 120V, can continue to the right for 220 VAC lamp choices for their light.

Super Clamps

Long an indispensable staple of the photo studio, super clamps are used for hanging backgrounds and lighting fixtures. The wide jaws typically expand to 2.5". This opening makes the clamp ideal for use with expandable poles, thick stands, and even tabletops. Super clamps are rated for 33 lb and have a receptacle on one end for a hexagonal bolt with a 5/8" fitting with a 1/4"-20 thread for a light fixture or other device. One can even attach a second super clamp to the fitting for securing a boom or accessories such as u-hooks, brackets, and wedges. The possibilities are endless, which is why most studios and location photographers frequently stock ten or more.

Cardellini Clamps

Similar to super clamps, Cardellini (also referred to as Matthellini) clamps have a well-earned place in the studio clamp hierarchy. The main benefits of this clamp are the wide jaw width, which is useful for attaching to thicker supports, and the ability to fit in tighter spaces than super clamps. Opposite the jaws is a 5/8" fitting for lighting or other gear. The wide locking knob rotates freely on the threaded shaft and makes it easy to apply pressure as needed.

C-clamps

C-clamps are made for jobs requiring a very strong grip. Usability can be almost anything and include suspending overhead lighting fixtures, heavy-duty rigging, and more. Generally made of cast iron, these clamps are prized for their ruggedness and durability. And for added peace of mind, C-clamps can be tightened with a wrench or pliers.

Pivot Arms

Photographers reach for pivot arms to position reflectors, gobos, lights, and other gear. These arms are especially useful in tight spaces, or when other grip solutions fall short. For added versatility, some pivot arms accept accessories, such as mounting studs or clamps. Attaching to tabletops, stands, cameras, and pipes are a few of the ways pivot arms are used on set.

Suction Cups

Clamps with a suction cup base are useful for attaching a light to a window, smooth tabletop, marble wall, or other flat surface. Photographers often employ suctions cups when other options are few or impractical – such as mounting a camera to the hood of a car. The important thing is to make sure the suction cup is secure before mounting a light or other gear. Relying on suction alone, it's important to stay within a suction cup's maximum load rating. Numerous accessories may be fitted with suction cups – such as ball heads, clamps, posts, and more.

Truss Clamps

With a threaded bolt for securing gear, truss clamps are designed for use with pipes and truss systems. The ingenious use of wing nuts makes tightening fast, easy, and sure. Unlike many other styles of clamps, truss clamps have a tubular shape that helps avoid damaging pipes. Best of all, the hinged design makes this style of clamp easy to attach and remove.

Adapters

Vital to exploiting a clamp's full potential, adapters come in a variety of sizes, threads, and shapes for accommodating the mounting requirements of lights and accessories. Threaded adapters are often used for attaching a tripod head. Before selecting an adapter with a stud end, it's important to make sure that it will work with the receiver on the item you plan on attaching. One adapter that should be found in every photographer's kit is the 1/4"-20 to 3/8" adapter – this can be a real lifesaver.

C-Stands

Available in a variety of configurations that include removable bases, long or short lengths, black or silver finishes, and with accessories such as grip arms and heads, C-stands are indispensable for the well-equipped studio. Bases feature rotating legs that fold flat or compact storage and easier transportation. C-stands outfitted with a grip arm may be used as short booms, for holding reflectors or flags, and more. Supporting heavier lights with a sandbag or two over the legs is one of the primary ways C-stands are used.

Crank & Windup Stands

These stands are used in similar ways to C-stands, but with the added benefit of having a crank to help lift and lower heavier lights and other gear. Unlike stands without a crank, positioning a light high above one's head is easier and can be more readily accomplished without a ladder, due to the central location of the crank. Using a windup stand is safer because it reduces the strain and possible injury of supporting the weight of a light while locking and unlocking sections.

Booms

Booms are often used to suspend a light or microphone over a set. Some booms feature multiple sections and cranks to control rotation and other functions. The key to using a boom safely is to make sure it's properly counter-balanced to prevent the light or stand from tipping over. Attaching a counterweight and tightening the boom to the stand where the weight is balanced are considered best practices for boom usage.

Air-Cushioned Stands

Anyone who has ever pinched their fingers while lowering a light on a regular stand will appreciate the benefits of using an air-cushioned stand. Generally, air-cushioned stands are made for supporting heavier lights. When unlocking sections of the stand, the air cushioning feature allows the section to descend slowly. This is accomplished by the slow release of air inside each section.

Boom Stands

Optimized for their intended use, boom stands are available in a variety of configurations that are suitable to the way a boom will be used. Some elaborate boom stands feature rolling bases with platforms for stabilizing weight, winding cranks for raising or lowering the boom, and positioning controls for gear. Whether heavy-duty or lightweight, having a boom stand to match your boom can help simplify using booms and reduce setup and strike times, too.

Roller Base Stands

One of the most useful stand accessories is a roller base stand. Adding a roller base makes moving a light from spot to spot easier. Rolling options include swiveling casters, ball bearings, locking wheels, and more. Due to the added weight at the bottom, roller base stands are often more stable than other stands. Some photographers use roller base stands at events and other situations where they might be bumped. The reason for this is that a roller stand has a somewhat greater tendency to roll a few inches instead of tipping over and possibly causing injury or damage.

Panasonic AU-EVA1
Compact 5.7K Super 35 Cine Camera

The lightweight, compact 5.7K AU-EVA1 is a cine-style camera positioned between Panasonic's pro-level VariCam LT and their mirrorless, DSLR-sized Lumix GH5 camera. Your carefully composed image is captured on a Super 35mm-sized 5.7K sensor with oversampling producing a finer, more accurately rendered image in 4K, UHD, 2K, or lower resolutions. With 14 stops of dynamic range, the EVA1 produces fine gradations in color and exposure. Like its VariCam cousins, the EVA1 uses V-Log/V-Gamut capture to accurately record skin tones and colors.

Essential Optical Filter Picks for Video Capture

by Mary Latvis

Why Choose Optical Filters?

When looking to align camera images with what their eyes see, to subtly smooth complexions, or to create specific looks for various scenes, moods, or locations in their projects, experienced videographers and cinematographers often turn to optical filters. When you're confident of the look you want, optical filters also enable you to "bake in" elements of your vision, saving time in post and reducing the possibility of unwanted or unintended "corrections."

While many filter looks can, indeed, be replicated or at least approximated digitally in post-production, certain effects are best created in the act of capturing your scene. Practiced on-set filter use can also reduce time and cost and avoid any additional noise created when applying digital effects during the editing process.

In general, while color-correcting in post is a vital creative process for many shooters, adjustments to parameters like contrast, reflections, diffusion, and flares are better handled while recording. The paths of light rays are physically tweaked as they pass through these glass filters, a process more difficult to achieve or simulate electronically than adjusting color, hue, and saturation.

Leading the Pack: Polarizers

Perhaps the one filter you must have in your kit, a polarizer is invaluable for seeing through glass reflections, reducing glare, producing saturated colors, and increasing contrast. Polarizers make clouds "pop" in landscapes and, for wildlife documentary or fishing reality-show creators out there, they enable your camera to see beneath the surface reflections of rivers, bays, lakes, etc. This magic comes at the cost of one or more stops of exposure but then again, a polarizer can also do double duty as an ND filter, when called for. Use a rectangular or square polarizer in a rotating filter stage or matte box, or step up to the convenience of a rotating, round polarizer housed within a standard-sized rectangular filter frame. Circular polarizers use an additional layer to avoid the autofocus issues that can arise with linear polarizers and some DSLR or mirrorless cameras. The selective filtering of light rays achieved with the use of a polarizer is just not possible in post, so make a "pola" one of your first filter selections.

Neutral Density (ND) filters darken your overall image, thereby requiring the use of a wider aperture and producing the resultant shallow depth-of-field, motion blur, and/or bokeh effects that you desire. Reach for higher-density ND filters when shooting on the beach, on snow-covered slopes, or anywhere you'd like to reduce high-intensity overall light. Horizontally graduated ND filters enable you to bring down a blown-out sky at the seashore or other bright location without underexposing your talent or objects in the lower portion of the frame. IR NDs filter out infrared rays that may show up as color contamination on digital camera sensors, particularly with denser ND grades. Variable NDs are rotating filters that enable you to "dial-in" varying degrees of density; these round filters are a handy choice for drones or for DSLR/mirrorless shooters looking to save both time and weight in their setups.

Diffusion filters like Tiffen's Black Pro-Mists and Schneider's Hollywood Black Magics can be found on almost any professional television, movie, or commercial set featuring live actors. These filters subtly soften your picture by using embedded particles, threads, or indents to "defocus" tiny portions of the image while maintaining sharp overall focus and contrast. Use diffusion filters to reduce fine skin details on your talent and/or to create a more film-like, less stark look when shooting HD, 4K, or even higher-definition video. Fog and mist filters produce a similar though heavier effect suitable for exterior shots.

Some Filter Facts

Common pro-cine sizes include 4 x 5.65", 4 x 4", 138mm and Series 9 rounds; additional options include smaller sizes designed for drone and still-photography lenses. Filter "strengths" are usually defined in fractions and whole numbers, although a few lines like Pancro's Mitchell Diffusions are labeled "A" through "E."

Premium filters are constructed with finely polished and ground high-quality glass to provide even light transmission and consistent, accurate color reproduction. "Water white" glass and some manufacturers' proprietary glass formulas reduce the green tint that may be seen in lower-quality glass filters.

Instead of stacking multiple filters, try combo filters to save space and set-up time; these are especially handy when balancing a drone or saving weight on stabilizers or handheld rigs. Combination filters include ND/diffusion pairs and various diffusion duos.

Additional Optical Filter Choices

Other popular optical filters include 812 or other Warming filters, Antique, Suede, or other selections that are used for the duration of a shoot or to lend a certain look to vintage flashbacks or select locations in your story. Color-correction filters can match or correct ambient light or reduce the cast of sodium or mercury-vapor lights on exterior locations. When used properly, Day for Night or Day for Evening filters cheat a nighttime look during the day, eliminating fatiguing and costly overnight shoots.

Available in solid and graduated versions, Coral, Sunset, Blue, and Storm filters are used to customize the look of your exterior beauty or establishing shots. The grads provide a split field effect more easily than one can replicate in post-production.

Once you get your optical filter use started with a polarizer, or add an ND for some shallow depth-of-field effects, you'll want to explore others to customize your look throughout your shoot. ■

Finding the Stabilizer for You

by Steven Gladstone

When it comes down to it, there are two kinds of stabilizer systems: mechanical and motorized, and there are mechanical and motorized stabilizers for virtually every size and weight of camera. What is important to note is this does not refer to either in-camera or in-body stabilization, since those functions are primarily designed to assist with handheld footage, and using these stabilization modes while mounted on a stabilizer can, under certain circumstances, cause unsteady footage.

Mechanical

The first successful stabilizer was the Steadicam. In the simplest of terms, it consists of a vest that supports the weight of the rig, a spring arm that absorbs the vertical and lateral shocks, a sled for balancing your camera, and a gimbal that allows smooth movement in three axes. This was originally designed for film cameras, and it coincided with the rise of the video tap, which allowed you to see the image that the camera was filming. We tend to take that for granted these days, because digital cameras can easily output video to monitors, but it wasn't so simple in the days of film. So, we start with the Steadicam, which is still manufactured today. If you are working with a heavy camera, you may want to consider a vest system such as the Aero or Zephyr. The Aero is available as the Aero 15 and Aero 30, which refers to the total load capacity (supporting a net camera weight of 10 and 20 respectively), and is well suited for cine production. The Zephyr has the same load capacity as the Aero 30 but is more suitable for the broadcast world because it has built-in Tally for live broadcast, more power output options for accessories than the Aero, and the monitor and battery are supported individually with the Zephyr for faster dynamic balancing. Steadicam isn't alone in the vest-mounted stabilizer category; manufacturers ranging from Came-TV, DJI, Glide Gear, and Glidecam, all make stabilizers that feature a vest and arm.

Dropping down in weight class are the sled-only type stabilizers. Sled-only stabilizers come in two forms—ones that work with an arm, and ones that do not. These are generally designed for smaller cameras that don't require a support vest and arm to prevent fatigue. Those featuring a center shaft where the gimbal attaches can usually be mounted on a vest/arm system, but can be used to "fly" your camera without an arm, as well. Here you find a variety of sleds capable of handling everything from compact camcorders, DSLRs, mirrorless, action cameras, and even cell phones. Steadicam is well suited here with its M1 and Solo stabilizers for larger cameras, and its Merlin2 and Curve for smaller and action camera, and the Smoothee for mobile devices. The straight shaft provides the same basic style of use as a vest and arm rig, relying on your arm and the three-axis gimbal to float the camera. For smaller cameras, there are curved stabilizers, where the support curves forward and then back underneath with the bottom weight centered under the camera, and these are quite popular. Originally based on just providing a balance point for the camera, these supports relied on increased mass and the operator to make smooth movements. However, these supports now also include gimbals, which help smooth out your camera movements.

Motorized

Motorized gimbals have become all the rage, since it takes far less practice to get smooth shots than when working with mechanical stabilizers. There are single-handed and two-handed motorized gimbals and, as to be expected, the choice between the two is mostly based on the size and weight of your camera. Single-handed motorized gimbals are usually good for supporting payloads of up to about 10 pounds, with many designed for smaller and lighter cameras, or even smartphones. For anything heavier than 10 pounds, you might want to think about what it would be like to hold that camera with one hand for several minutes, and you get some idea of why, for heavier payloads, a two-handed motorized gimbal is desirable.

The development of the single-handed gimbals continues unabated, with improvements to mechanics, design, and software control coming at a fast pace. Originally, these motorized gimbals had a support that could obscure the viewscreen of your DSLR or mirrorless camera, but improvements on this included adjusting the support to be at a 45° angle (referred to as "slanted") to clear the viewscreen when operating the gimbal, and the addition of a joystick that allows you to position your camera and adjust it during the move. Single-handed gimbals are made by an alphabet soup-worth of manufacturers, including Aluratek, Axler, Benro, CamTV, DJI, DOBOT, Draco Broadcast, EVO Gimbals, FREEFLY, Feiyu, FreeVision, Glide Gear, Glidecam, GoPro, ikan, KumbaCam, LanParte, marSoar, Moza, Nebula, Pilotfly, REDFOX, REMOVU, ROXOR, Snoppa, Tilta, YUNEEC, Zhiyun-Tech.

How to choose is, of course, the question, and the answer is to first narrow it down. Are you planning on shooting for 360 VR with multiple cameras? If so, then the Netmedia Alpha360 is probably for you. However, choosing between smartphone, action cam, mirrorless, and DSLR is more likely your first option, unless you are interested in the DJI OSMO, REMOVU, or ROXOR gimbals since those have built-in cameras. Some gimbals designed for smartphones can be converted to support select action cameras, and vice versa. One thing to remember: the bigger the camera the gimbal will support, the bigger the gimbal is likely to be. You may be tempted to get a big/heavy gimbal thinking that you can always put a lighter camera on it. This isn't the best of plans. Gimbals tend to have a weight range in which they operate best. Even though many offer smartphone apps that let you tweak the motors, putting either too little or too much weight on a gimbal is going to lead to less than the best stabilization, so match the load capacity of the gimbal you are looking for to the weight of your camera.

Most single-handed gimbals feature a ¼"-20 or 3/8"-16 threaded mounting screw on the bottom of the handle. This is a great feature because it allows you to attach a small set of tripod legs, often included with the gimbal itself, to the bottom of the gimbal handle. This setup makes balancing your camera on the gimbal a breeze, as opposed to having to hold the gimbal while trying to balance the camera on it, which often turns into a comedy of errors of elbows and knees. This tripod often collapses, providing you with an extension handle or, instead, you could add a monopod for increased reach for high-angle or low-angle shots.

Two-handed gimbals are, likewise, best considered based on weight range. These can support cameras from mirrorless up to Digital Cine cameras, although here Feiyu stands alone with a two-handed gimbal for smartphones. You can consider two-handed gimbals as those that include secondary accessory handles, convertible from single to two handles, built-in handles, and support frames. One of the advantages of two-handed gimbals over a single-handed gimbal is that you can support additional accessories such as focus motors. Although it is worth pointing out that Zhiyun-Tech's WEEBILL LAB and CRANE 3 LAB are both single-handed gimbals and support optional lens motors, which are controllable via the gimbal, you can more easily attach lens motors and wired or wireless controllers to two-handed gimbals. FREEFLY's MOVI M5 and MOVI Pro, ARRI's MAXIMA, Tilta's Gravity, and DJI's Ronin are two-handed gimbals that are well suited for external lens control, monitors, and wireless transmitting kits for Larger DSLR and Digital Cine cameras.

Combinations

You can mount motorized gimbals on mechanical stabilizers, which can produce incredibly smooth moves with multiple axes of stabilization, as well as movement, and when working on complex moves with heavier cameras, the combination can provide you with the best of both worlds.

Conclusion

Whether you choose a mechanical stabilizer, motorized stabilizer, or a combination of the two, the two most important factors in creating smooth cinematic shots is to match the weight range of the stabilizer to your camera, and to get the balance of the stabilizer as close to perfect as possible. ■

WHITEBOARDS & EASELS CHARGING CARTS

Get your point across with the aid of one of the many presentation surfaces offered at B&H. These surfaces include whiteboards, which are great for classrooms, meeting rooms, or other fixed-installation applications. Delve deeper into the digital age with projector-friendly whiteboard screens, or opt for an interactive whiteboard that lets you annotate on the fly. Charging carts are great for keeping all your devices charged and ready to go. They also provide a mobile solution for mounting and transporting your projector.

REPLACEMENT LAMPS

Is your light output beginning to dim, or do you just prefer to have an extra lamp on hand? B&H has you covered with replacement lamp options for multimedia, home theater, and professional installation projectors. The estimated lifespan of a projector lamp can vary based on viewing conditions; having a replacement lamp available decreases projector downtime, allowing you to spend more time projecting images at optimal brightness levels. When displaying important content, having your projector ready to produce at all times is a necessity.

An Indie Filmmaker's Core Audio Kit and Tips

by Shawn C. Steiner

Among the biggest mistakes beginner and indie filmmakers make is not putting effort into audio. One-man bands are especially susceptible, with audio being one more thing to worry about. Bad audio can break a film and make it practically unwatchable. People can forgive some errors in a video—there is that little thing called suspension of disbelief—but, they absolutely will not forgive unintelligible dialogue, improperly mixed sounds, or distorted audio. With just a few key tools and a little bit of knowledge, you can upgrade your audio game

What's in the Bag?

Everyone wants to preach, "It's not about the gear." Well, they are right—until it is about the gear. Just because you have a fancy new DSLR that shoots 4K video on its awesome full-frame sensor doesn't mean you will instantly be recording amazing audio. Far from it. Internal microphones on cameras are notoriously bad; they don't have great pre-amps, they can't get that close to their subject, and they are generally not spectacular to begin with. There's no such thing as a free lunch and, with relatively affordable stills cameras with video capabilities, many compromises will need to be made. In most cases, these compromises come on the audio side.

The best practice would be to pick up some dedicated audio equipment. Starting off, the easiest recommendation is a shotgun microphone. RØDE's now classic VideoMic series is among the best and most popular, with lightweight, compact designs that just work. Pop in a battery, connect it to your camera's audio input, and you now have vastly improved audio without much effort. Moving up from this you will want a serious shotgun microphone for use on a boompole—just like in the movies! A boom is used to get the mic closer to your subject and record cleaner audio. Shotgun mics are also known for a directional pickup pattern so that you can point it at your subject and hear just them. This makes them outstanding tools for filmmaking because you can keep them out of the frame and still record excellent audio.

The second mic to pick up would be a lavalier. This one should be obvious for anyone who shoots interviews or talking heads.

It's small omnidirectional mic that can be attached to a shirt or jacket for quick and easy pickup of voices without being a large, obnoxious thing to carry around or set up. It's much more mobile and doesn't require a second person to operate like a boom-pole would. Being so effective and compact makes it a no-brainer for an indie filmmaker's kit.

Optimal recording will require a dedicated audio recorder. With one, you gain professional-quality inputs, multiple mixing techniques, optimized physical controls, and better-quality audio components. Using one introduces you to dual-system sound, meaning you are going to be recording the audio and video separately. This is also the moment to get familiar with a slate with clapper sticks. Assuming many one-man-band filmmakers are also their own editors, this will do you so much good. It makes syncing up your footage and audio much easier because you can match up the clap with the spike in audio levels and the moment the sticks hit in the frame. Or you can do the same with the clean audio and the scratch audio recorded by the camera.

Recorders bring with them professional inputs, as we mentioned. Specifically, you should be looking for XLR inputs if you are getting serious with your audio equipment. This allows you to use high-end microphones that rely on this connector. It is also a much more secure option than your more common 3.5mm jack. If you are looking at some serious microphones, you will eventually need to upgrade to XLR in part of your audio capture system.

Finally, perhaps the most important tool in your bag is a set of solid headphones. Just because you have good mics, a great recorder, and good technique, doesn't mean the audio is perfect. You absolutely must put on a set of headphones and listen for any issues before you start recording. Levels can be deceiving because they don't tell you whether there is a low hum in the background or some handling noise interfering with your mic or recorder. And, if you have someone speaking in your video and the audio isn't workable, then that take is unusable.

Core Knowledge

Getting gear won't solve every issue, which is why the phrase, "It's not about the gear," is very true. Capturing clean audio has a lot to do with technique, and you can do a lot with inexpensive equipment. It is also another technical area of filmmaking because there are numerous settings and numbers-based settings to track.

An example of this is simply setting the proper recording format. The most common choices will be MP3 and WAV. Go with WAV because it is an uncompressed format, while MP3 will reduce your audio quality. Bit depth is the next option and you will be fine at 16, though bumping up to 24 won't hurt. Finally, for sampling rate, I recommend sticking with 48kHz. These are pretty much standard these days so there is no need to deviate all that much.

For recording, you should start by watching your levels. You will generally want to keep your levels between -6 to -12 dB. Anything lower and you will have to amplify your signal in post and introduce noise; higher and you risk peaking and causing distortions by breaking the 0 dB limit of most recording systems. It's a safe place to be, though if you are worried about loud noises, you can use functions such as a limiter to prevent losing audio when the volume rises unexpectedly.

Another setting you may find on your recorder is the low-cut filter. This is useful for reducing some background noises. Think the hum of a fridge or air conditioner. Ideally, you should turn these noisy devices off but, in some cases, you just can't and the filter will help minimize their impact. You can also pick up a couple of blankets and they can be used to help silence problematic devices in the background. In many cameras and certain mics, you may notice a wind filter setting. This can help prevent wind from destroying your audio, but it is far from ideal. When shooting outside, a windscreen is highly recommended.

By using this basic set of guidelines and a few select tools that you can easily add to your bag, you can transform the audio quality of your productions. Good audio is a critical step in making your productions sound professional and increases general watchability of the videos themselves. Make sure you are thinking as much about sound as you are about video. ■

Shotgun Mics are characterized by a long narrow tube design, not unlike the barrel of a shotgun. These highly directional mics are commonly used for ENG, broadcast, and location sound applications. They provide a narrower angle of acceptance that isolates the subject's sound from unwanted "off-axis" ambient sound. Shotguns are frequently mounted on boompoles or directly onto a camera in more basic setups.

BOOMPOLES

Aluminum poles are lightweight and strong, and they offer a great value for their price. Poles made of carbon fiber (CF) offer a high strength-to-weight ratio, and therefore represent the ultimate in smooth superlight handling performance.

Boom Poles from Auray

Telescoping Boom Poles from Auray are designed to accommodate Electronic News Gathering (ENG), Electronic Field Production (EFP), documentary, and other field recording applications. With sizes ranging from 2' to 16', they allow you to place a microphone in close proximity to the subject, while remaining at a distance and out of the frame.

The Auray ABP series is constructed of sturdy, lightweight aluminum, and the CFP series is made from reinforced carbon fiber composite. Models from both series are available with or without an integrated XLR cable. Auray also offers a wide range of accessories to enhance and expand our boom poles and tailor them to fit any project.

Why Auray?

ALL MODELS:

Drop-Through Modular Design
lets you quickly and easily add or change tips, cables, and extensions without any special tools or skills.

Integrated Coiled XLR Cable
smoothly extends and retracts with the telescoping tubes. The cable also features a unique strain relief system.

CARBON FIBER CFP SERIES:

Unique Anti-Twist Feature
prevents the tube sections from rotating independently of each other, and allows for one handed operation of the twist locks.

VIDEO EDITING SOFTWARE

After capturing video for your production, the next step is to edit the content into a final project. The first stages of post-production include capturing or digitizing the data into an editing system, whether it be a Mac or Windows. There are even Linux-supported editing apps available. From there, you can edit with most file types and resolutions, including SD, HD, stereoscopic 3D, VR, and up to 8K resolution in native format. Editing functions include trimming of individual clips, adding titles, mixing audio tracks, color correction, adjusting speed playback, adding transitions, and many more features. Some editing software gives you the option to mix and match different formats, frame rates, and resolutions in the same timeline without rendering. Options are available for most editing software to include third-party effects and plug-ins to fine-tune your project before going on air, uploading it to the web, or distributing it on DVD and Blu-ray.

COMPOSITING & PLUG-INS

Comprehensive visual effects and compositing packages come as stand-alone applications or as plug-ins compatible with most Video Editing software. To make a workflow as efficient as possible, editors seamlessly transition into several different job titles with a click of a mouse or a keyboard shortcut. Powerful tools include color correction, denoiser, titling, removal of wire rigs, edge blur, compositing, lens flare, filtering, 3D and 2D VFX, upscaling, image restoration, VR tools, and hundreds of additional options. Simply apply a plug-in right on your editing timeline and adjust the settings for the desired look. Plug-ins fit every artist, from the beginning designer who is inspired by the presets to the hard core VFX artist who builds looks from scratch. A wide variety of tools lets you define the style of your video or film, opening a realm of creative possibilities. And with plug-ins, you can process SD, HD, 2K, and 4K images on standard hardware, or up to 8K x 8K pixels with the latest GPUs.

ANIMATION

Whether creating visually stunning Pixar-inspired 3D animation or creating complex objects using the latest CAD software, your creativity has never been easier. Transform your 2D designs into 3D models using customizable 2D drafting tools and 3D design tools for any industry. Comprehensive toolsets are available for creating advanced 3D graphics, 3D modeling, and 3D animation. Whether you are creating an illustration, a game character, a toy, and a figure for 3D printing or designing jewelry, sculpting, and painting, software gives you the basic platform to easily make it happen.

Z Series G4 Workstations

Enjoy smooth rendering of 3D models, compiling of programming codes, and handling of other intensive tasks with the new Z Workstations from HP. Under the hood, an Intel Xeon processor can be found along with 2666 MHz DDR4 ECC RAM. To help prevent data corruption, ECC RAM automatically detects and corrects errors. Beyond memory correction, an HP Z Turbo NVMe SSD operates under PCIe lanes that offer fast, sustained read and write performance for large file sizes. This solid-state drive is installed in an M.2 slot, making it useful for recording or editing audio or high-resolution RAW video files. Windows 10 Pro 64 for Workstations is installed on this drive. Furthermore, these Z workstations are equipped with an NVIDIA Quadro graphics card to generate high-resolution graphics and large datasets for VR as well as graphic design.

As for connectivity, you'll find two Gigabit Ethernet ports and ten USB 3.0 ports, with one of the standard USB ports supporting device charging. Other notable connections include one headset connector, audio in, audio out, PS/2 mouse, and PS/2 keyboard. There's also a slim SuperMulti DVD-RW drive for recording memories on to optical media. The expandability features on the HP Z4 G4 start with two 2.5"/3.5" internal bays along with one M.2 slot and one 5.25" external bay. The workstation is armed with multiple PCIe 3.0 slots to enable support for optional Thunderbolt 3 cards, RAID controllers, and other useful PCIe cards. For accommodating up to 256GB of memory modules, a total of eight slots are available.

Tips for A Killer Vocal Sound in a Home Studio

by Nick Messitte

Getting a good vocal sound in your home studio is not a matter of snagging yourself a great mic and a fantastic mic chain. If it were that simple, more people of means would be securing killer sounds at home. There's a lot more at play, starting, of course, with the vocalist. One hopes that the singer is, if not a dynamo, at least interesting. If things don't work well at the cource, you've got little hope for a great sound down the road.

But let's assume you've got a great talent in your midst. Heck, maybe it's you—maybe you're recording yourself, and you want the best sound you can get out of your home studio. Believe it or not, an expensive mic and a priceless preamp shouldn't occupy the locus of your focus quite yet; plenty of great performances have been gleaned from a Shure SM58, which is about as wallet-friendly as a pro mic can get.

First, work on the acoustics of your room. Most home studios are situated in a boxy room—and a boxy room exhibits all sorts of acoustical problems. From flutter echo to unflattering room modes, the aspects of an untreated room can corrupt even the best mic chain. Comb filtering can seep into the vocal, canceling out vital mid-range frequencies and emphasizing unflattering high-mids. Such an issue really narrows your options in the mix; distortion and complex reverberation can help bring some life to the sound, but these processes can signify genres that might not be in line with the mix itself.

No, better to fix the issue at the source.

Hearing this, you might think, "I'll get myself one of those reflection filters I see in the trades!" or, "I'll deaden up my room deader than a dead guy who's dead."

Careful! Don't go overboard! An overabundance of treatment can have a negative effect. Not all room absorbers are fashioned out of the same material; say you put up 703 fiberglass panels all over your room. Depending on the density of these panels, some frequencies would wind up more impeded than others; some frequencies would be overly present in the reflections bouncing back into the mic. The result? Not a flat sound, and definitely not an easy sound to work with in a mixing context.

On to reflection filters, which, though helpful in some circumstances, can only get you so far; they often expose the top of the capsule to your room reflections, and sometimes generate unwanted reflections of their own (the cheaper ones tend to, anyway).

For the price of the best reflection filters, it's often better to pick up a room-treatment bundle from, say, Primacoustic or Auralex. Then, treat the surfaces that face the microphone directly, including on the ceiling. If you record with a cardioid mic (and in a home studio, chances are that you do), try deadening up what's in front of the mic, and leaving the space behind the cable relatively live. It can often give a more balanced result.

Next let's concentrate on mic technique for the home studio. Since your room is probably not akin to something like Ocean Way Studios, it pays to minimize the room in the recording as much as you can. Try getting closer to the mic to "overpower" the room, if you will. Doing so will induce the proximity effect—the closer the singer stands to the mic, the more low and low-midrange content you'll find in the resulting recording—but a little proximity effect never hurt anyone, and it can be taken out with EQ either during the recording or in the mix.

Of course, if your computer has a noisy fan, if your hard drives make whirring sounds, or if you've got the A/C running, that'll show up in the recording. Try to use components that don't make noise, such as solid-state hard drives. If that's not an option, there's always RX Elements for noise reduction in post, which works quite well.

And yes, shut off your AC. If necessary—if it's audible—shut off your fridge too!

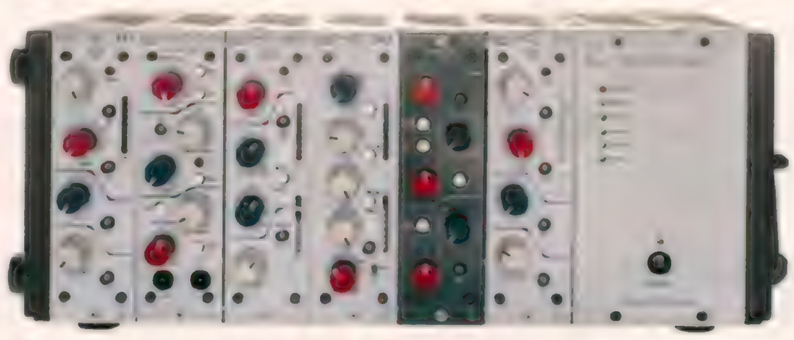

If your room is quiet and treated, and you want to mitigate some of that proximity effect, move the singer away from the mic. If your room is noisy, and if there's a specific frequency bothering you, try to amend the issue with EQ. Various hardware equalizers are more than up to the task. Of course, if you've got something like a Universal Audio Apollo, you can nick the troublesome frequency out of the signal with one of their Unison-enabled EQs on the way in.

Now, if you find the singer is overly sibilant on the esses, rotate the capsule so that its front isn't pointed squarely at the singer's mouth. Experiment with the best "diagonal positioning," and you'll find a sound that's bright without being overly sibilated.

Okay. We've spent some time on room treatment and mic technique, so now we can move on to the part you really care about—the gear.

... And just like that, we've run out of space!

Just kidding! But, as we draw to a close, it's important to note there are millions of apposite microphones, and no single mic will work on every vocalist. When auditioning a microphone (in a place like our SuperStore, for instance) it's important to ask some questions. Are you mostly recording one specific person (say, yourself)? If so, it pays to bring that person in to a testing environment and try out a bunch of mics.

Disregard the price tag as you listen; go for what sounds the most appropriate on the sound source. Try to narrow your focus on specific parts of the frequency spectrum: how robust do the low-mids sound on this vocalist? How brilliant (or harsh) are the highs? Pick the one that works, within the budget you have, and don't worry about name brands.

On to the mic pre: if you've got yourself an all-in-one interface from Universal Audio, Antelope, Apogee, MOTU, or another brand, you already have a preamp that's clean enough for the job. If you want something with more mojo, consider preamps from Rupert Neve Designs, Warm Audio, BAE, API, and many others.

In recent years, companies like Slate Digital and Antelope have started to offer packages that model the hardware and software of both mics and preamps. Indeed, you can get yourself a virtual mic chain from either company that, to many ears, rivals the original hardware equipment.

The possibilities are virtually endless. They also aren't strictly necessary—great records have been made with an SM58 and a good, clean audio interface. Much more important are the room and the talent. Sort those out, and you're more than halfway there. ■

Large Diaphragm Condenser Microphones

A go-to mic choice for tracking vocals, voice overs, string instruments such as acoustic guitars and violins, percussion, and more, B&H carries a wide variety of large diaphragm condensers to suit a variety of needs and budgets. Available selections provide polar patterns ranging from supercardioid (very narrow pickup path) to omnidirectional (360-degree pickup), while many can handle SPL levels as high as 150 dB for use on louder sound sources. Many selections include stands, cases, and cables and come in a wide variety of finishes.

Small Diaphragm Condenser Microphones

A mic locker standard that is at home in front of a variety of string or acoustic instruments, choirs, drum overheads, and more, small diaphragm condensers are both excellent on their own and integral companion mics to their big brother, the large diaphragm condenser.
Available selections provide polar patterns ranging from hypercardioid (very narrow pickup path) or omnidirectional (360-degree pickup), with certain models handling up to 155 dB of SPL. Many selections include stand mounts and cases, and like large diaphragm condensers, they are available in a variety of finishes.

auray Isolation Pad for Studio Monitor

This monitor speaker isolation pad is made from high-density acoustic foam that is designed to decouple your monitor's speaker from its resting surface by absorbing the monitor's vibrations. This stops reverberation through the desk or speaker stands. Removing these unwelcome vibrations results in greater depth of field, tighter low-end and transient response, and a higher level of detail across the frequency spectrum.

Small 7.5 x 11.25" (AUIPS) 15.00
Medium 10.25 x 14.5" (AUIPM) 16.00
Large 12.75 x 12.75" (AUIPL) ... 17.00

Auralex Acoustics Monitor Isolation Pads
for Pair of Speakers

Sometimes easy solutions provide benefits that far outweigh the cost. In this instance, isolating one's monitors from what they are standing on, be it speaker stands or the meter bridge of a console, can provide an instant improvement in bass response and stereo imaging.

The three-leg design has a base spread of 23" for stability and a geometry that allows for the stand to fit around corners and beside studio furniture. MUSIC PRODUCTION SOFTWARE

If you're going to create, compose, program, mix, or master music on a computer, you'll need music production software. Any piece of said software is usually referred to as a DAW (digital audio workstation), and different DAWs have different inherent usages. One might be more suited for the recording, mixing, and editing processes (think Avid Pro Tools or Steinberg Cubase), while another might be more geared towards the manipulation and instantaneous creation of electronic music, either for live performances or for programmatic recordings (Ableton Live and Propellerhead's Reason come to mind). Others still are often used in the composing and mixing of film (Motu's Digital Performer). Whether you choose to use the aforementioned DAWs or something like FL Studio or Bitwig Studio, the decision is ultimately a personal one; whichever DAW you utilize will shape your workflow, enable certain parameters while curtailing others, and affect your overall creative output. So make sure the DAW you go with gives you what you want in terms of track count, rewire capability, MIDI import/export options, hardware connectivity (MIDI and analog), and system compatibility.

VIRTUAL PROCESSOR PLUG-INS

For equalizers, check out the FabFilter Pro Q 2, which is a linear phase EQ plug-in with mid capabilities, 24 assignable bands, an intuitive interface, and a bevy of bells and whistles. As for dynamics processors, B&H has a virtual ton of bundles (Waves, UAD, and McDSP are all excellent) and single downloads to boot (The elysia mpressor and alpha compressor come to mind, as do the Pro C, Pro L, and Pro MB from FabFilter). To introduce some dirt, grit, and character into your signal, try out a channel strip for a vintage combination of EQ and compression; the BOZ DIGITAL +10 db and Softube Tube-Tech Classic Channel are both excellent for this purpose. Onto the ambiance: Waves and UAD have several reverb modules, the Lexicon PCM Native Reverb Bundle, which gives you seven models of classic Lexicon digital verbs. Your DAW's onboard delay will usually add the space that echo can provide, but if character is your goal, check out Waves' H-Delay and Boz Digital Lab's Imperial Delay, both of which have extended features to mangle up your signal in a most pleasing manner. For pitch correction, try the Melodyne 4—the only plug-in to be name-dropped in a pop song. Guitar amplifier/cabinet emulations are also worth pursuing: IK Multimedia's AmpliTube and Positive Grid's BIAS are great places to start.

VIRTUAL INSTRUMENT PLUG-INS

If you are working under a budget and your track requires an analog-style synthesizer or symphony orchestra, you'll want to stock up on virtual instruments. Native Instruments has products to suit any occasion, most notably within their Kontakt engine, which can trigger orchestral libraries from developers such as Spitfire Audio, Chris Hein, and more. Moreover, their Massive synth gives you both micro and macro control over sounds for EDM, hip hop, and other genres. Kontakt, Massive, and many more are available in their Komplete bundle. Also, be sure to check out Spectrasonic's Omnisphere 2 and KV331 Audio's SynthMaster, both of which give you an array of cinematic sounds. For the analog purists out there, u-he has quite a few vintage synth recreations, including ACE, Bazille, and Diva. If it's a comprehensive slate of bass timbres you're after, Spectrasonic's Trillian more than fits the bill. Finally, for drum programming, we carry FXpansion's BFD and Geist, the former being a superstar for acoustic drum triggering, the latter giving you a prime selection of sampled hits.

The Store Inside the SuperStore: The B&H Used Department

by Todd Vorenkamp

Did you know there is virtually a separate camera store that lives inside the B&H Photo SuperStore, in New York City? Now you do. The B&H Used Department can be found at the top of the staircase leading to the second floor of B&H Photo's expansive showrooms. There you can sell your used gear, or you can purchase used gear in great condition. Not only do they have a selection of rare and vintage film cameras, but you can also find the latest digital bodies and lenses, as well as gently used items from almost every other line of products B&H Photo sells—including lighting, video, pro audio, computer, and home entrainment products

Selling Your Gear

The B&H Used Department takes pride in paying full market value for your used equipment, and will buy your gear, either at our New York City location or over the Internet.

If you're not in New York City, hit the B&H Photo website, click on Used, and then click where you see the "Cash-in Your Gear" link. You will be able to get a quote for whatever you are selling (if it's not too obscure). B&H will tell you exactly how much you will get for your item based on its condition, and they will send you a shipping label, allowing you to mail the item to B&H Photo, free of charge. Did you find your grandparent's old camera in the closet? Did you stumble across a photographic gold mine at a garage sale? For almost whatever you have, the B&H Used Department might be interested in buying it.

Once your gear arrives at B&H, a team of technicians will carefully evaluate the item to make sure it is in good working condition. If it passes this test, it goes onto the shelf and onto the website for purchase and you get paid in the form of a check or B&H Photo gift card (electronic or physical).

Buying Used Gear

Are you in the market for some photo, video, pro audio, computer, or home entertainment gear? What about an un-crashed drone? Look no further than the B&H Used Department!

On the B&H Photo website you can peruse the thousands and thousands of used products that we sell and see a very accurate condition rating for whatever piques your interest. Again, the Used Department not only has cameras, we sell lighting gear, camera bags, computers, pro audio gear, televisions, and almost anything else that B&H Photo Video sells. Are you looking for a new desktop or laptop, but you don't need the performance (or cost) of the latest PC or Mac? Check out the Used Department for your next digital companion.

Also, in the environmentally conscious world of today, don't forget that buying used items is a form of recycling, and recycling benefits us all! Aside from saving your hard-earned cash, this is just one more reason to feel good about purchasing a used item.

If you are shopping online, you will see that every item in the Used Department gets a rating describing its condition. Any item that is rated a 10 is likely an unused returned item or something that never really left the box for one reason or another.

And, even though all the gear has passed tests to be pronounced fit-for-sale, there is a generous 30-day return policy on used equipment if something were to happen and a 90-day warranty. And, don't forget, used items ship to you just as fast as B&H's new stuff.

The Resurgence of Film

The Used Department is stocked full of digital cameras and the latest lenses, but the right side of the counter features used film equipment, including beautiful Leica M rangefinders, classic Nikon SLRs, twin lens Rolleiflex masterpieces, and gorgeous Mamiya medium format systems. At the film counter, Brent, Michael, and Chris have, between them, well over a century of film photography experience, and they are happy to guide you to a great purchase of a new (to you) film camera.

Speaking of film, there has been a resurgence in the film world of late and, unfortunately, no one is really making 35mm film cameras anymore. Because of this, supply has been down while demand has been steadily increasing. If you have a long-unused film camera at home, B&H Photo has a home for it on the Used Department shelves, where it will await an excited student just entering the magical world of film photography, or a new owner looking for a great retro picture-making experience. If you want to step away from the weight of the digital world and try the purity of film, come to the B&H Used Department in New York, or head online and get yourself a beautiful Canon AE-1, Nikon FM2, or Olympus OM-1, then pick up a lens and a roll of film and go shooting!

The Mini Camera Museum

Last, but not least, if you get to New York and visit the B&H Photo Video SuperStore, be sure to swing by the Used Department to see our collection of rare cameras on view in the Camera Museum vitrines (before someone buys the ones that are for sale)!

Do you need some extra cash and have old equipment that you wish to clear out? Are you thinking about switching to a new camera and/or lens manufacturer, while simultaneously looking to economize on your new gear? Or, are you ready to upgrade to the latest and greatest model of your favorite camera? The B&H Used Department is a convenient and easy place to accomplish any of those tasks! ■

B&H USED EQUIPMENT - ALL EQUIPMENT IS GUARANTEED TO WORK, REGARDLESS OF ITS COSMETIC CONDITION. USED AUDIO, PHOTO, AND VIDEO EQUIPMENT (EXCLUDING VIDEO HEADS) HAVE A 90-DAY PARTS & LABOR WARRANTY FROM DATE OF PURCHASE. YOU CAN RETURN IT TO US WITHIN 30 DAYS OF RECEIPT OF THE ORDER.
